GENERAL WHAT TO WEAR & BRING: You may find that the Outback sun is stronger and warmer than what you are accustomed to. Hats, sunglasses and other sun protection items are necessary – even in the winter months. We travel through various climate zones. Temperature differences between night and day are extreme in the outback. December – February are the warmest and wettest months in the tropic north June – August is winter. When in the south and in the outback, you encounter night temperatures near freezing point, although the days are quite warm. Clothing should be casual and footwear comfortable. Practical clothing, which you can remove a 'layer' at a time. Some restaurants and hotels may request 'neat and casual dress' and refuse admittance to persons in thongs and T-shirt. If you need special medication; it is advisable to bring your own adequate supply for the trip's duration.
